B. Activities of National Cadet Corps (NCC)

Sanitizer Making and Distribution

Cadets of the NCC Army Wing of TMG College Tirur have taken an initiative in the preparation of hand sanitizer during the lockdown time. The preparation of hand sanitizer was controlled by Dr.Ushakumari.P, former Principal, TMG College Tirur. Many cadets residing nearby our college had participated in the making and distribution of sanitizer. We distributed it to the nearby areas and shops surrounding the college.

Distribution of Pulse Oximeter

Cadets of the NCC Army Wing of TMG College Tirur organized an oximeter challenge by collecting 100 rupees from persons who was interested to donate. It became a successful event that many people other than the staff of the college showed interest to donate to the challenge. We purchased around 35 oximeters and donated them to the authorities of Vettom Panchayat.

The Oximeter Challenge for students and the public by our College NCC Unit was tweeted by the Defense Ministry of India on their Official Twitter Page and got appreciation from various quarters of society.

C. Other Activities

Online Padanathinoru Kaithangu (A Helping Hand towards Online Learning)

The practice was initiated to ensure that the digital divide did not hamper the academic requirements of our students during the Covid 19 pandemic. The pandemic necessitated the transition from traditional to online classrooms so rapidly. Surveys were conducted through WhatsApp groups by each department, and the number of students who lacked accessibility to online learning was identified. The faculty and College Union raised funds and provided mobile phones to these learners. The participation of students in online classes increased with this supportive intervention.

Maths Aspirants

Maths Aspirants is an initiative started by Dr. Vinod Kumar P., Associate Professor of Mathematics, T.M.Govt. College, Tirur, Kerala in 2017. Maths Aspirants WhatsApp Groups were started in 2017, with limited participants from his student's circles, to provide an online platform to share and discuss views and doubts about Maths concepts and problems and to facilitate preparations for exams like JAM/NET/JRF/GATE/TIFR, etc. This students'-oriented group garnered huge acceptance soon leading to the creation of five more annexure WhatsApp groups with capacities at the maximum. These groups now emerged as an effective platform for those who are curious and passionate about Mathematics. Many of the group members succeeded in various competitive exams and now pursuing PG/Ph.D. programs in many premier institutions.

When the COVID-19 pandemic paused regular education, Dr. Vinod Kumar. P started conducting Online Exam Series and Online Problem-Solving Sessions for Maths students to keep them in touch with the subject and to upkeep their practice for the competitive examinations in a time-bound format.

These tests and problem-solving sessions are purely voluntary and have reportedly helped students to revise the concepts. More than 50 online examinations and more than 80 live problem-solving sessions have been successfully conducted since April 2020. The uniqueness of these Problem-Solving Sessions series is that they were handled by research scholars and young faculty members from premier institutions in India and abroad.

Tirur professor's online maths test turns students' heads

ASWIN NANDAKUMAR @Kozhikode

DURING the lockdown when the Netflix generation is falling head over heels over the 'Professor' of smash-hit series 'Money Heist', a real-life professor from Parappanangadi in Malappuram has grabbed national attention for academic reasons.

While educators are feeling stuck at home due to the lockdown, Dr Vinod Kumar P, assistant professor at Thunchan Memorial College, Tirur, diligently launched a weekly online maths test using 'Google Docs' app. By the end of his fourth test, his initiative gained ground among maths geeks across the nation, aspiring to crack competitive exams like NET, GATE and IIT-JAM. The number of students taking up his weekly test skyrocketed as the link was shared in various study circles on social media.

His fourth test, held last Saturday, had 933 takers from across 24 states. Three students from Pakistan also enrolled themselves for the test. Students from premier institutes like IITs and NITs also signed up in large numbers.

"The response is surprising," says Vinod who delved into the online medium only to conduct an internal exam for his students. His test — comprising 25 questions — designed in multiple select formats, covers one topic every week. Each test is online only for 75 minutes on Saturday, from 8pm to 9.15pm. The topic for the next exam is announced a week before.

The earlier exams focused on topics like real analyses, topology, differential calculus, and convergence and continuity.

Soon, Vinod's tests became a talking point in academic circles in the country.

“The response is surprising. Three students from Pakistan also enrolled for the test. Students from premier institutes like IITs and NITs also signed up in large numbers.”

Dr Vinod Kumar P

"It is seamless and impressive," says Avishek Adhikari, mathematics professor of the prestigious Presidency University, Kolkata. "By the fourth edition of the test, my students have shown remarkable improvement in performance," he says.

Vinod says setting the questions takes two-three days.

"It's time consuming. I need to give the answer key answer explanation, provide graphics as well as the link for further reading," says the 39-year old who is also the academic chief of the Kerala government's education initiative 'Dhamush'.

Soon after the test, Vinod announces the results as well as the names of top 10 performers. "Each participant also gets a copy of his answer sheet, too, along with other statistics."

Meanwhile, Vinod gets complete statistics on which questions were the most difficult as well as the pattern of errors.

"It is a great feeling. I wish to make it a fortnight activity after the lockdown ends," says the PhD-holder from Calicut University. "With technology adoption, possibilities are infinite."

Club Activities

We have various clubs in our college like Koodu, Neithal, Film Club, Music Club etc., Koodu tries to build a bridge between academics and how it is manifested in our day-to-day discourses. Koodu organized discussions on the challenges faced by the contemporary world, thereby participating in knowledge production. It is envisioned as a space to hold discussions on literature, reading, and contemporary issues. Academicians of various disciplines and from different knowledge systems were invited to interact with our students. Neithal also organized online lectures on various environment-related topics. The film club and Music club also conducted various online cultural programmes.
